Enjoy Foods From Many Cultures

As a diverse Nation, we can embrace our cultural traditions for the foods we love and still prepare them in healthier ways. Here's a few ideas on how to make favorite recipes healthier, and still remind us of our treasured food ways.

Cook with others—Learn about cooking different traditional or regional foods from others who use authentic recipes and ingredients and explore ways to improve the nutrition of some of your own family favorites. Cooking dishes at home allows you to add variety to meals. If needed, adapt recipes by cutting back on gravies, creams, and sauces; adding more vegetables; or baking instead of frying.

Blend cultures—Many popular foods and beverages in America blend the cuisines of many cultures. Celebrate our Nation's diversity and be inspired by dishes that include more fruits, vegetables, whole grains, beans, seafood, lean meats, and low-fat dairy.

Add a touch of spice—

Combinations of herbs and spices often remind us of dishes from our own heritage or our favorite ethnic food. Add flavor to meals with herbs and spices, such as chili, garlic, ginger, basil, oregano, curry, or cilantro, which can replace salt and saturated fat.

Remember, all types of foods fit on MyPlate. MyPlate is designed to remind Americans to eat healthfully, using foods from the food groups. Find more practical information, tips, tools, and recipes at ChooseMyPlate.gov.

Stretch your Fruit & Veggie Budget

There are many ways to purchase fruits and vegetables at the store. Some cost you less at the checkout.

Buy it Canned—Choose canned fruit packed in 100% juice and vegetables that have no salt. Rinsing regular canned vegetables before you eat them cuts down on the sodium.

Cut at Home—Pre-cut fruits and vegetables are convenient but cost more. Buy whole and cut it at home.

Buy in Large Quantities—Frozen fruits and vegetables cost less in larger quantities. You can take out smaller portions as you use them.

Mix it Yourself—100% juice from frozen concentrate is often less expensive per serving than pre-bottled juice.

Keep it Simple—Buy dry beans in their uncooked form instead of the packaged versions which cost more.

Pick the Perfect Dried Bean

Beans are an excellent source of protein and provide other nutrients such as iron and zinc. They are part of the Protein Foods Group; however, they are also part of the Vegetable Group because they are excellent sources of dietary fiber and nutrients such as folate and potassium. Different beans do not vary greatly in nutrient content, but they do differ in taste, texture, and uses.

Black beans are medium-sized with black skin. They are sweet-tasting with soft texture. Black beans are versatile and used in main dishes, soups, dips, and salads.

Great Northern beans are medium-sized with thin white skin. They have a mild flavor and are often used in soups, such as ham and bean.

Kidney beans are large, kidney-shaped beans with either deep red skin or light red/pink skin. They have a firm texture and hold up well in soups or other dishes that cook for a long time.

Pinto beans are medium-size with beige and brown skin. They are one of the most popular beans and are used to make refried beans.

Rice and Red Beans

Try this vegetarian meal as a main dish, side dish, or as filling for tortillas!

- 1/2 tablespoon oil (canola or vegetable)
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
- 2 medium tomatoes, finely diced or 1 (15 ounce) can diced tomatoes, drained
- 1 medium green bell pepper, chopped (about 1 cup)
- 2 ribs celery, sliced (about 1 cup)
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
- 1 can (15 ounces) red beans (rinsed and drained) or 1 1/2 cups of cooked, dry beans, drained
- 4 cups brown rice, cooked

1. Place oil in large skillet and heat. Add onion and cook until soft. Add garlic, tomatoes, green pepper, celery, and oregano.
2. Cover and simmer until vegetables are crisp tender (about 5 minutes).
3. Add beans and simmer. Stir mixture every once in a while until heated through.
4. Cook rice according to package directions. Spoon the vegetable and bean mixture over rice.

Dear Sue,

I know dry beans are loaded with nutrients, fiber, and are budget-friendly. I'm trying to eat more, but I'm concerned about intestinal gas. Any suggestions?

Rosy Toot

Dear Rosy,

There are several things you can do to eat beans and avoid getting intestinal gas. Here are a couple suggestions:

- Let your body get used to eating beans. Eat small amounts (2 to 4 tablespoons) at first and increase the amount you eat over time.
- Soak beans before cooking, discard the soaking water and cook beans in more water. The longer you soak and cook beans, the easier they are to digest. For simple instructions on cooking dry beans, go to <http://www.extension.iastate.edu/foodsavings/recipes/preparing-dry-beans>.
- Try to rinse canned beans before eating.
- Look for gas-reducing enzyme tablets that are available over-the-counter in many pharmacies.

Sue

MyPlate Tip

Celebrate traditions, especially those that help you stay physically active.

Wisconsin Women, Infants and Children (WIC) Program

In September 2015, Wisconsin WIC Program began rolling out their Electronic Benefit Transfer (EBT) or eWIC. EBT uses a magnetic stripe or smart card, similar to a credit card, that participants use in the check-out lane to redeem their food benefits.

EBT provides a safer, easier, and more efficient grocery experience and provides greater flexibility in the way WIC participants can shop. In addition to food packages, WIC participants have access to a number of resources, including health screening, nutrition education and breastfeeding counseling, immunization screening and referral, substance abuse referral, and more.

To learn more about WIC eligibility and how to apply, visit <https://www.dhs.wisconsin.gov/wic/index.htm>.

Kids in the Kitchen...

Liking New Foods Takes Time

It is normal for children, especially preschoolers, to reject foods before they have tried them. Young children may have to eat a food 15 times before they like it and eat it every time you give it to them.

Make introducing new foods fun!

- Try pairing new foods with a favorite food.
- Have your child help you prepare the new food.
- Eat the new food with your child to show them you enjoy it.

Remember, be patient and keep trying!
